questions of the highest state policy, to those affecting the humblest citizen, issues of life, liberty, property and property rights, and the orderly pursuit of happiness, the preservation and maintenance of the peace and welfare of the people of the state.

The scope of their influence and the magnitude and burden of their obligations and responsibilities grow with the increase and activity of industrial and commercial development. Hence the necessity for the multiplication of the circuits and circuit judges and thus the union of Harrison and Lewis counties in one circuit.

As there is but one supreme law of the land, there can be but one, and therefore, there must, and, as long as there is virtue and honesty and prudent and wise citizenship, there can be but one just and equitable construction, interpretation and application of that law, and that construction, interpretation and application alike in all cases, in which the issues are the same or similar, no matter who the person or what the interest.

Many years ago, Hooker, in order to impart his idea of the dignity, scope and impartiality of law, uses this language, perhaps familiar to many of you:

"Of law there can be no less acknowledged than that her seat is the bosom of God, her voice the harmony of the world; all things in heaven and earth do her homage, the very least as feeling her care, the greatest as not exempt from her power, both angels and men and creatures of what condition soever though each in different sort and manner, yet all with uniform consent, admiring her as the mother of peace and joy."

Natural and divine laws uniformly affect all alike and without respect to persons, inflict the same quality, measure and degree of punishment upon the transgressor. Human laws demand like uniformity, immutability and impartiality.

It is then the duty, the imperative duty, the sacred, solemn obligation of the individual citizen to preserve and persevere in the preservation of the sanctity, purity and honesty of the courts of justice established by his state and the general government from the highest to the most humble.

No influence, no possible calamity, nothing of any character, can so certainly, quickly and indubitably threaten impair or subvert our American institutions and shake the foundations of our American liberties as a corrupt or corruptible judiciary, but so long as the judiciary is maintained in purity and enforces the law with regularity, promptness and efficiency, free from suspicious influences, however occult or secret, and retains and deserves to retain, the implicit confidence and respect of the citizenship, whatever else may happen, whatever else threaten, the government of the people, for the people and by the people will be preserved.

Therefore, and in order that the court may not be the subject of animadversion, the judge, whether circuit or appellate, state or federal, should be just and liberal, firm in his conviction of right and wrong, courageous and steadfast in the discharge of every judicial obligation, without fear, favor, partiality, bias or prejudice; knowing neither friend nor foe, social or political, but having in view that proper administration of justice which will promote the general welfare and good order of society and will deal justly, equitably and honestly between litigants. Neither favoritism nor enmity should mark his conduct.

To him all laws and violations should appear alike except so far as the statute declares a difference in degree of punishment whatever may be the law violated. He should not discriminate between laws except where that discrimination is justified by the law and practice in proceedings under it. In other words, all laws and all violations should have and receive, at his hands just, fair, conscientious and fearless consideration and treatment. He must observe that orderly procedure approved by long usage, which, in cases of violations, consist of an indictment by a grand jury, a fair and honest trial in the ordinary course of judicial investigation, and, if conviction follows, he should mete out that reasonable and salutary measure of justice properly applicable to such cases, and, in so doing should be moved neither by passion nor by prejudice for or against the accused whatever may be the law violated. No man should demand more, nor be satisfied with less. No just judge will grant more or refuse less. He should never be unwilling to grant the fullest measure or assurance, that, in a proper and conscientious discharge of judicial obligations there should not be a reasonable suspicion of impropriety. Every appearance of evil, and every means susceptible of suspicious influence should be sedulously avoided, so that every finding and judgment, so far as possible, may meet the approval of the impartial, intelligent observer and fully accord with the most refined sense of judicial integrity.

Thus I have sought to impart, briefly my ideas of the dignity of the official position for which you have so kindly chosen me, and of the obligations to be assumed by him who shall be chosen by the people to fill that position; and to assure you and the electors of the thirteenth judicial circuit, that if that choice should designate me, my honest and constant effort will be not to swerve or falter from the faithful observance of the requirements I have named.

My constant aim shall be to conduct the business of the court with efficiency, promptness and energy, free from bias or prejudice for or against any person or interest, whoever or whatever that person or interest may be, to carefully examine into and fully consider all cases presented for determination, whether civil or criminal, and pass upon decide the same, as in my judgment the law and facts shall warrant and shall seem reasonable, just, honest and fair having due regard for the rights, liberties and privileges of the entire citizenship, and in every respect, to deal justly, fairly and honorably, without fear or favor, partiality bias or prejudice endeavoring always to heed the advice of Moses to the Judges in Israel namely: "Hear the causes between your brethren and judge righteously between every man and his brother and the stranger that is with him. Ye shall not respect persons in judgment but ye shall hear the small as well as the great and that which is altogether just shalt thou follow."

To accomplish this I shall invite and hope to receive your aid and support and that of the public generally and especially the aid and support of the members of the bar, upon whose fidelity, learning and ability the courts must rely and whose aid and support I shall always welcome. In return, I will cheerfully accord them the fullest measure of my confidence and esteem. They and each of them, whether strong in the confidence of victories earned and won or trembling with the timidity incident to first experiences at the bar, all alike, shall have candid, frank and friendly treatment upon all occasions and in all cases in court and out of court.

BIG FAIR APPROACHING

Thirty-Eighth Annual Exposition of the West Virginia Agricultural and Mechanical Society is Almost at Hand.

The great Clarksburg fair will be held this year August 29, 30 and 31 and September 1. It promises to be the greatest in the thirty-eight years of the society's existence. Special attractions have been arranged for and an extensive program has been prepared.

The annual fair book has just been issued from the Telegram office, giving full information as to premiums, program and so on, and can be obtained at any of the banks and other public places. The coming exhibition is being thoroughly advertised with the view to interesting all the people in the several counties in the central part of the state and it is expected that the attendance will be the largest in history. Hotel accommodations are more extensive and attractive than ever and none need go without a bed or food. There will be ample entertainment for all visitors.

The annual book shows a careful revision of the premium list in the various departments, with a view to promoting the various industries and vocations, skill, science and handicraft, as well as the breeding of fine stock.

That the exhibits may be numerous and of superior quality the hearty co-operation of all is earnestly solicited and the management is anxious that all the classes be completely filled.

To the business people of Clarksburg: There is a growing question in many parts of our country for business houses and offices to close up for a half holiday on some afternoon in the week during the months of July and August for the purpose of giving their employees time for rest and recreation.

In view of the fact that the Young Men's Christian Association of our city has arranged for an athletic meet to be held at the old fair grounds on Thursday afternoon, August 11, and has provided an excellent program of sports and music and as that association stands

NOT A PATENT MEDICINE

Hyomei, the Guaranteed Catarrh Cure, Prescribed by Physicians.

No one should confound Hyomei with patent medicines that are advertised to cure catarrh. It is as far superior to them all as the diamond is more valuable than cheap glass. Their composition is secret, but Hyomei gives its formula to all reputable physicians.

Is it not foolish to try and cure catarrh by swallowing tablets or lozenges? The only natural way to cure this disease and all other diseases of the respiratory organs is to breathe Hyomei.

This treatment has been so successful, curing 99 per cent. of all who have used it, that Hyomei is now sold by Stumm & Co. under an absolute guarantee to refund the money if it does not cure. You run no risk whatever in buying Hyomei. If it did not possess unusual powers to cure, it could not be sold upon this plan.
